LOIRE VALLEY 2024

Guided Tour

Guide cycling with group | 300 km | 7 nights / 8 days

Known as the Valley of the Kings and the Garden of France, the Loire Valley is a lush region steeped in History. The French Royal Court moved there in the 14th Century, sparking a riot of Renaissance architecture including the magnificent chateaux of Chambord with its 365 chimneys, Chenonceau with its spectacular ballroom, and dozens more. The Loire Valley also boasts fields and fields of sunflowers and a surprising variety of wines as well as distinctive and delicious cuisine.

TOUR ITINERARY

DAY 1      Saturday      Arrive

Transfers will be arranged from Angers train station to your hotel.

We start from Montreuil Bellay, a delightful walled village with a striking chateau overlooking the river Thouet. We have time to set your bikes up and go for a spin, but you may prefer to lounge by the pool and enjoy a cold pastis.

DAY 2      Sunday      Montreuil to Chinon      26 miles / 42 km

Between Montreuil Bellay and our first sight of the Loire lies the vineyard of Saumur-Champigny, rated by many as the finest red wines of the Loire Valley.

Our first stop is at Château Brézé, famous for its amazing underground chateau. Dating back to the 7th century, these troglodyte homes and villages are a feature of this area. The limestone is so easily worked that it was easier to carve out a new bedroom than to build one!

One of the reasons behind the underground Château at Brézé was to avoid the attention of invaders, such as Vikings, and the whole château is geared toward defence, including the deepest dry moat in Europe. There are fascinating defensive structures here, but most interestingly, it was never attacked, let alone defeated. All that effort over more than 1,000 years, and nobody ever attacked it.

Afterwards we make our way to the Royal Abbey at Fontevraud. This huge Abbey was traditionally the home of many French Queens, but is most famous as the resting place of Henry II, his wife Eleanor of Aquitaine and their son Richard the Lionheart. King John I's wife, Isabelle of Angouleme, also lies with them, but is a bit less famous.

Today we can pass through Montsoreau where the Vienne flows into the Loire. The Loire is very wide here, and Montsoreau looks beautiful stretching along the south bank. We end the day in Chinon. In the 12th Century Chinon was effectively the English capital as successive Kings made their home in the château. It is much older than most Loire château, and its military purpose is obvious from its commanding position along the ridge that overlooks the medieval town of Chinon. We stay at the Hotel de France overlooking the beautiful Place du Général de Gaulle where you can relax in any of the many pavement bars and cafes.

DAY 3      Monday      Chinon to Azay-le-Rideau      35 miles / 57 km

Today is fairly light cycling as we have a lot of château-action to fit in. We can start with a tour of the castle of Chinon. As well as home to English Kings, the castle contains the tower where Joan of Arc 'heard the voices' telling her she would be granted an army to relieve the siege of Orléans. We leave the Vienne and continue our cycling tour back towards the Indre and the Loire. Overlooking the Indre is the first of the big-league château, Château Ussé, the inspiration for Charles Perrault's Sleeping Beauty.

Next on our hit-list is Villandry, an unexceptional château, but with gardens that Michelin rate as a 3*** attraction - 'worth a journey in their own right'. There are three gardens - a vegetable garden, a flower garden and a water garden. Each year the gardening team choose a theme and tell a story in flowers. Villandry is really something, and not to be missed.

Finally today on our cycling holiday we will travel the 11 km or so to Azay-le-Rideau, another member of the Premier League of Loire Châteaux. Azay-le-Rideau is surrounded on three sides by the River Indre, which has been carefully landscaped to provide a beautiful reflective setting for this ornate château. There was no military purpose to Azay-le-Rideau, it was just designed to be beautiful, and it is.

Tonight we stay at the Hotel des Chateaux, on the outskirts of Azay-le-Rideau.

DAY 4      Tuesday      Azay-le-Rideau to Loches      36 miles / 57 km

We start the day with a visit to the purely decorative château of Azay-le-Rideau on the river Indre, and boy is it decorative, and finish in the medieval Cité Royale of Loches, on the Indre, where sits the Donjon of Loches. A donjon is a fortress and this place is very obviously built for function rather than form.

In between we cycle over the beautiful rolling farmland of the river Indre, acclaimed as the most beautiful landscape of all the rivers of the Loire Valley. Depending on timing and inclination, we may be able to visit the Donjon in Loches on our arrival in town, or, if you prefer, a stroll around the royal residence, home of many French Kings, not to mention their wives and mistresses. There will also be more opportunity for these visits tomorrow morning as both are just a stroll (okay, a steep stroll) away from tonight's hotel Le George.

DAY 5            Wednesday    Loches to Montrichard                            25 miles / 40 km

Before leaving Loches, we will attempt to fill any gaps left in your knowledge of its medieval royal buildings after which we will head back across country to the most visited of all Loire Châteaux, Chenonceau.

Built as a bridge over the Cher and surrounded by ornamental gardens and man-made moats, this château manages to live up to the usual French hyperbole of its website. It truly is unforgettable.

Most of the rooms are open, and this is a chance to see original floors, tapestries and furniture. In general French Châteaux don't have all the furnishings and interior detail that we might hope to see. Chenonceau is a pleasant exception, and Louise of Lorraine's room, painted entirely in black with silver motifs of tears and crowns of thorns to mourn her dead husband, is especially memorable. The ballroom, built by Catherine de Medici, spans the Cher in spectacular fashion, and although the Château had no military value it took on a gloomy historical role in the 20th century. First, it served as an army hospital in the First World War. Then, In the Second World War, the Cher was the boundary between German-occupied France and Vichy France. Château Chenonceau was a border post, each end of the ballroom opening into a different country.

Our hotel tonight is the Hotel Bellevue in Montrichard, a few kilometres upstream from Chenonceau, overlooking the Cher.

DAY 6            Thursday        Montrichard to Chambord                            36 miles / 57 km

A short ride beyond Montrichard, on Thursday morning, are the fascinating mushroom caves of Bourré, where they grow Blue Foot, Shitake, Oyster and Paris mushrooms. Mushroom mycelia need a stimulus to prompt growth - European mushrooms tend to need a light or heat stimulus, but the shitake mushroom from Japan grows naturally on trees and responds to earth tremors common in that neck of the woods. Earthquakes are simulated in the caves using the state-of-the-art device of slapping the bin-liner that contains the mushroom compost. Result? Lots of 'shrooms. It's true, honest! Bring something warm for a visit of around an hour underground. As well as mushrooms, there are a few spectacular galleries where you can see fantastic sculptures of local village scenes through the ages carved from solid rock. If you've never seen a sheet of paper carved in limestone before, complete with curled up corners and the heads of the nails pinning it to a wooden notice board (also carved in limestone, complete with wood grain), then you're in for a treat.

The end of today we arrive at the enormous Château Chambord. This is by far the largest of all the Loire château and was originally built by Francois 1 as a hunting lodge. It lies inside a huge park contained by the longest wall in Europe, all 32 km of it. The château itself contains a famous double-helix staircase thought to be inspired by Leonardo da Vinci, where two people can ascend or descend at the same time without meeting.

Our hotel tonight is the Hotel St Florent, 10km further on from the château in Mont-pres-Chambord.

DAY 7            Friday            Chambord to Amboise                            33 miles / 52 km

Well, sadly, nobody explained this to whoever designed the route of the Loire cycle path into Amboise with the result that one or two lumpy climbs feature in an otherwise easy ride into Amboise. However, before that, we will visit and taste the wines at Vignoble Tevenot, a very traditional family winemaker in Cellettes, just on the edge of the enormous forests that surround Chambord. The final destination of our tour is Amboise, where the setting of the château overlooking the Loire is one of the most used images of the Loire valley. The town has a medieval centre, largely pedestrianised and full of bustle. There are a number of bars and cafes sitting directly beneath the huge château walls, and I reckon we've usually earned a sit-down and a glass of the local Touraine or Vouvray.

For anyone who hasn't visited Leonardo's place at the Clos-Lucé, it's well worth it. Many of the original furnishings are still in place, including the great man's bed, and there is a permanent exhibition of his inventions and writings including several exquisite scale models.

Tonight we are staying at the Hotel Vinci and we eat at the Lion d'Or.

DAY 8      Saturday      Homeward bound

We're only 20 minutes from the TGV station at St Pierre des Corps, and a gentle departure time of 10.30 am gets us back to Paris before midday and London St Pancras by mid-afternoon.

Please take careful note of the train times above. Our transfers are scheduled to meet these designated trains; if these train times are inconvenient, please contact us so that we can be sure of arranging appropriate transfers.

You will be met at Angers between 17:12 and 17:25 on Saturday by a tour representative who will be easily identifiable and brought by minibus to the starting point at Montreuil Bellay. Our transfer aims to leave Angers station by 17:40. At the end of the week you will be brought to the train station St Pierre des Corps for the departure to Paris Charles de Gaulle / Montparnasse and London (via Lille) at 11:01. Both transfers are included in the tour price.

These are the only transfers that we arrange to Angers and from St Pierre des Corps so it is very important that you are on the right train. If you are experiencing any difficulties, do let us know and we will try to help as much as we can. If you do miss the train, try and arrange to get on the next one. If you have to pay for another ticket you are responsible for the cost (depending on circumstances you may be covered by insurance). Call the owner of the first hotel and give them your name and arrival details. The tour guide will help you arrange another transfer to the hotel.

Making your own way to Montreuil Bellay

You can get a train to Saumur either from Paris or from St Pierre Des Corps, and buses operated by the train company leave Saumur for Mntreuil Bellay every hour.

GENERAL INFORMATION

The Wines of the Loire Valley

The Loire valley is a long way north for a wine region, but for centuries 'the Garden of France' has produced vast quantities of wine. The only world class wines from the Loire are the imperishable vins liquoreux found among the Coteaux du Layon in appellations such as Bonnezeaux and Chaume, but there are wines of real interest and quality to be found by those willing to look.

The first vineyards on its descent from the Massif Central are found in Pouilly Fumé and Sancerre, renowned for their flinty dry sauvignon blancs. Further downstream there are red wine appellations such as Chinon, St Nicholas de Bourgueil and the more prestigious Saumur-Champigny, all made primarily from the Cabernet France grape.

Saumur-Champigny is restricted to just 9 municipalities, but the wider appellation of Saumur is the largest producer of sparkling wines in the world outside Champagne. The history of sparkling wine here is a result of too many unreliable harvests producing thin, acidic wine. Locals developed the method of adding sugar to encourage a secondary fermentation that produces a more reliable product, and the famous fizz. This isn't cheap Champagne - some argue that this is where the 'traditional method' was first discovered, and there are some wines of real quality produced under the appellation of Saumur Brut.

Another appellation of note is Vouvray, once one of the most renowned appellations in France, and now rebuilding that reputation. Vignerons in Vouvray can only produce white wine, and can only use the Chenin Blanc grape, but the variety of wines is surprising. There are bone-dry Vouvray Sec wines, and they range from off-dry to moelleux (not quite as sweet as a vin liquoreux). There are also sparkling wines and most unusually of all, Vouvray Pétillant - very slightly sparkling wine. This method requires a better quality wine to start with, and so a good Pétillant can be a delight on a hot summer day.
